

Director, LIED Institute for Real Estate Studies

University of Nevada, Las Vegas

The LIED Institute for Real Estate Studies at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas seeks a nationally-recognized scholar on real estate and urban development to be its next Director. Endowed in 1991 through a generous gift from the Ernest F. Lied Foundation Trust, the Institute was formed to meet the educational and research needs of real estate developers and local government officials charged with meeting the challenges of the Las Vegas community's unprecedented population growth. The establishment of Brookings Mountain West at UNLV with its emphasis on the issues facing the dynamic and fast-growing intermountain west region provides a unique opportunity for the LIED Institute to expand its geographic footprint through formation of a strategic partnership with this venerable institution. More information on the LIED Institute can be found at: www.liedinstitute.com. Information on the Brookings Mountain West initiative can be found at: <http://brookingsmtnwest.unlv.edu>

The LIED Institute Director reports to the Dean of the College of Business and must have a record of scholarly achievement commensurate with the rank of Associate or Full Professor in the College of Business. In addition to being a visionary leader with strong communication skills the successful candidate will have experience attracting funds through the forging of effective partnerships with government and industry.

Review of materials will begin March 12, 2010 and will continue until the position is filled. For a complete position description and application details, visit <http://jobs.unlv.edu> or call (702) 895-2894.
