

Academic Director Position at the Associate or Full Professor Level
Burnham-Moores Center for Real Estate
University of San Diego

The University of San Diego, Burnham-Moores Center for Real Estate is seeking an academic director at the Associate or Full Professor level starting in the late summer of 2010.

Teaching will be mostly graduate level in this entrepreneurially-oriented real estate program. Land economics, market analysis and sustainable real estate teaching interests are desirable. Research interest in sustainability a plus. Ability to interact with industry important. A spring visitation for 2 or 3 weeks to help teach the capstone course is also available. The capstone focuses on cases and entrepreneurial business planning. Campus and climate are beautiful. This is a private university. The Center provides extensive student support and industry interaction opportunities.

Please contact Mark Riedy, Center Director, at mriedy@sandiego.edu for additional information.